Reason Why Police Ordinance Was Council Grants Prayers of 11 and Re-Held up.

Board Can Now Increase Patrol Force by Adding Five Additional Men.

In the presentation of an ordinance to increase the number of patrolmen in the police department from 75 to 80 chairman Robert N. Gould, of the aldermanio committee on ordinances took the floor at the Aldermanic seesion last night to defend the committee from the rumored reason why it had not reported before. Mayor Lee rapped the leader of the young Republicans to order. Chairman Gould then moved the adoption of the report and when the question on the motion was before the house he continued his ex-

The story circulated was that Alderman O'Connell had a friend who wants to be a policeman very badly and that some of O'Connell's friends on the ordinance committee made it known that it would recommend the ordinance allowing five new patrolmen providing some of the members on the committee were assured that O'Connell's friend said to be Daniel Suilivan was placed beneath a halmet and back of a shield. Aldeman Gould stated that the story had undoubtedly been given out by irresponsible persons as neither he nor any of his colleegues upon the committee would assent to any such transference. any of his colleegues upon the committee would assent to any such transaction. He said the committee found the ordinance as amended in May 1907 called for a force of 75 patrolmen while at the present time there are 74 patrolmen. As the aldermen understood existing conditions the Board of Apportionment had appropriated $5,018.75 to pay for five patrolmen in Grade C., at a salary of $2.75 per day. "There are well founded rumors," said Chairman Gould, "that the police commissioners do not intend to use this money for the purposes it is appropriated for and unless it is true that Bridgeport is urgently in need

JAMES P. ELLIOTT

This Was Connecticut Regiment of Leavy Artillery - He Was Prominent Odd Fellow and Had Been Head of Many Organizations.

After a short illness, James P. E liott, for many years connected with the Union Metallic Cartridge Co., and a veteran of the four years of the Civil war, died at his home, 218 Bunne street, early last evening. Mr. Elliett was in his 74th year and up to January had been active in his business. He retired at the beginning of the year and while his health was not the best his demise was sudden and unexpected ond son of George and Hannah (Peters) Elliott. He was forced to go to work when nine years of age to help support the large family which were left on the death of his father. When not so engaged he acquired a common school education, and by study and close application he prepared and entered the Manchester academy, at Manchester. He had strong religious convictions and decided to become a minister in the Methodist denomination. In order to complete his education he taught school in Plainfield, N.
J., for a term or two and later, when about to graduate from the Manchester academy, found that his voice was failing and that he would have to give up his chosen career. He already was failing and that he would have to give up his chosen career. He already was licensed as a local preacher.

He entered the employ of a stockinet company in Manchester and with the breaking out of the Civil was enlisted in the First Connecticut Heavy Artillery, on June 10, 1861. He served through al ithe bloody battles of that remarkable regiment and on March 31, 1864, re-enlisted as a veteran. He was promoted to be second licutenant of Co. D of the same regiment and was mustered out September 25, 1865, having served four years and four months. He returned to Connecticut after the war and on May 17, 1869, married Miss Ellen Schildge of South Manchester, who survives him. Two sons and one daughter were born to the union but only a son survives, J. Edward Elliott, city editor of The Standard.

Mr. Filliott resided in West Stratford, now the East End, in the '70s, and was employed at the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine company's and was employed at the Wheeler & He removed to the East Side and in 1880 removed to South Manches ter to take charge of his father-in law's farm. Finding this too laborious he returned to Bridgeport in 1882 and entered the employ of the Union Metallic Cartridge company, and a year or two later was made foreman which position he held until his illness forced him to resign, shortly after the forced him to resign, shortly after the first of the present year.

He was a past grand of Samuel H. Harris lodge, No. 99, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, a past regent of Seaside Council, No. 709, Royal Arcanum, and deacon of the Church of the Redeemer, Universalist.

He was a man of strict integrity, high rowal gualities and a heliayer in high moral qualities and a believer in moderation in all things. He had been very active for a man of his age until last fall, when ill health developed. He was counted among the "young-sters" in the activities of the fraternal orders to which he belonged. He was a great admirer of athletics and in his younger days was a man of consider-able ability in that line. Although confined to the house sinc the latter part of January, he did not take to his bed until yesterday. Besides the widow and son, three brothers and one sister survive, Ben-jamin of New Britain; George of Santa Monica, Cal.; Austin and Mrs. Mary Kenny of Globe, Ore.
